HOUSTON – Bellaire High School student Louise Lu was named the national champion of Congressional Debate at the 2010 NFL National Tournament last weekend.

Louise bested hundreds of other participants at the competition, which was held in Kansas City, Missouri.

More than 3,200 students were at the competition, considered the world's largest academic contest.

In addition to winning the national championship, Louise was also awarded $6,000 in scholarships.

Other Bellaire High School students made their presence known at the competition. John Williams advanced to the semifinals of Congressional Debate while both Erik Nelson and Rohini Sigireddi earned 11th place in Public Forum debate.

The accomplishments of all the students at Bellaire resulted in the school winning the 2010 NFL School of Excellence in Debate.
